4.1.2 Receiving Complaints

The information relating to the complaint of the customers is logged and communicated to the Relations Manager in the SAP system at the complaint entry module ZCDS003, by selecting the complaint code identified in the SAP system by the relevant customer representative, and automatically classified in terms of fault severity. Error codes and severity are defined in the relevant module of SAP.

Customer complaints are recorded in the status "new record". If a sample review of the complaint is to be performed, the complaint status remains a "new record" until the sample is delivered to the Customer Relations Department. When the sample is delivered to the Customer Relations Department, the status of the complaint record switches to "Customer Relations". If a sample review of the complaint is not to be performed, the status of the record is recorded as "Customer Relations" by entering the information required to review the complaint.

4.1.3 Follow-up of Complaints

Customer complaints is also recorded with relevant transaction codes in SAP to ensure process traceability. Information on the current status of the complaint and its stage can be viewed in the SAP environment. Customer complaints are addressed with precision, importance and care in the context of customer focus approach, ensuring that they are resolved as soon as possible. The customer is informed by the customer representative about their complaint being processed and customer will also be informed, if required at a later stage, about the current status of their complaint.

4.1.5 Initial Assessment of Complaint

Customer Relations Department will review the information relating to the complaint and if there is any missing information about the complaint, they will conduct a preliminary inspection, providing the necessary information from the relevant customer or customer representative. The Department conducts a customer site visit with the customer representative to take samples or see the complaint on site, if necessary at this stage. Based on the information and findings obtained, the Customer Relations Manager first conducts an assessment to identify the main department where the complaint originates, and also logs the relevant information in the complaint assessment record by passing the complaint record to the relevant department. (ZCDS0004)

Priority assessment takes place where necessary, taking into account the content, quantity, impact on relations, security, reputation, business relations, customer impact, etc. of the complaint by the Customer Relations Department and ensuring that all complaints are resolved as soon as possible.

Complaints related to health and safety issues are considered highly important, thus immediately treated and evaluated.

4.1.6 Investigating Complaints

Following initial assessment of complaints and escalation to the main department where the complaint has been raised, the main department where the complaint has been referred to processes the complaint record and conveys the notification to the relevant sub-department.

The sub-department reviews the information relating to the complaint record submitted to them and then objectively evaluates their opinion to the complaint notification, providing the notification record to the Customer Relations department.

The complaint investigation considers all sources of information objectively and impartially by assessing the likelihood of them causing complaints or feedback.

5.0 Complaints Error Classification and Planning of Closure Process

Failure class codes for customer complaints and the severity of these error classes are defined in three categories in SAP as "HIGH, MEDIUM and LOW".

The planning of the closure period according to the severity of the complaints is as follows; with the first notification of the complaint, the Customer Representative takes the complaint record to "new record" status. If the sample examination related to the complaint is to be carried out, the status of the complaint record is "Customer relations" when the sample is delivered to the customer relations. If the sample examination related to the complaint is not to be performed, the necessary information for the examination of the complaint is entered into the complaint record by the Customer Representative and the status of the record is switched to "Customer relations".

The date of commencement for the first complaint investigation is the date the status of the complaint record is switched to "customer relations".

The status of the complaint record is switched to "main department" by referring the information and/or samples to the relevant main department according to the preliminary examination by the customer relations, the customer visit, if necessary, and the following evaluation result.

MI1: Customer visit and preliminary survey deadlines

2. After performing a survey, main department conveys the complaint record to the relevant sub-department concerned with the root cause of the complaint.
